One Hundred Years and Counting . . .

The twentieth year of the twentieth century left many historical legacies: Prohibition, women's suffrage, commercial broadcasting—and the Harvard Business School Club of New York. Launched one hundred years ago as a lunchtime get-together for alumni, The Club has evolved into a New York institution and a national forum for cabinet members, business titans, and others.

It also has developed business and cultural events, such as lifelong learning for alumni; awards, fellowships, and scholarships for nonprofit leaders and students; capital and counsel for entrepreneurs; and pro bono consulting for nonprofit groups. “People know about the speakers, but there is so much more to The Club,” said Chief Information Officer Vineet Kumar

(AMP 187). The Club's Chief Financial Officer, Ray Eason Jr. (MBA 2004), said the centennial is “a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to reconnect with other alumni.”

Send us your ideas on how to celebrate The Club's centennial. Email: centennial@hbscny.org.

“We're incredibly charged up that we will be able to celebrate our centennial. It speaks to how valuable The Club is and gives us a chance to reflect on our achievements and set new goals.”
Club President Andrew Cheskis (MBA 1984)

HBS NEW VENTURE COMPETITION FINALISTS WITH HBS DEAN NITIN NOHRIA

ENTREPRENEURS, ANGELS, & TECH NYC Startup Wins Global 'New Venture Competition'

For five years, The Club's Alumni Startups initiative has helped dozens of entrepreneurs win in the marketplace. This year it helped one win in the alumni track of the New Venture Competition organized by Harvard Business School's Rock Center for Entrepreneurship and Social Enterprise Initiative.

Blueland, a maker of eco-friendly cleaning products, won the HBS $75,000 Global Grand Prize, topping nine other regional winners from around the world. Gina Pak (MBA 2015), Blueland's CMO, praised Club mentors for their help. Advisors in the Alumni Startups program provide entrepreneurs like Gina with guidance on business plans, financing, growth, and customer service.

"New Venture Competition was an amazing opportunity and experience from start to finish. The support provided by my mentor and the NVC staff, the opportunity to meet amazing investors and hear their feedback as well as the engagement from attendees who are really excited by Blueland's mission, business and opportunity—every part of the experience really underlined how great it is to have programming such as this."

GINA PAK (MBA 2015) | CHIEF MARKETING OFFICER OF BLUELAND

"Alumni Startups has been a great help. By asking tough questions, Club advisors helped clarify our business objectives. They also kept us motivated and focused while introducing us to industry experts to help grow our business."

SHARON JOSEPH (GMP 20) | FOUNDER AND CEO OF BREWASIS

Later, Gina, along with SourceAble founder Nish Parikh (MBA 2017), and Grapevine founder Emily Rasmussen (MBA 2013), represented HBS at B-School Disrupt, a friendly competition with NYU and Stanford alumni to demonstrate talent for soliciting investors.

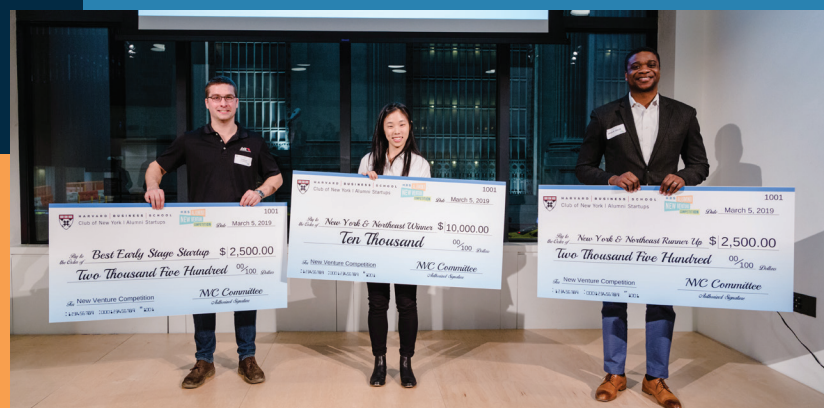

Vivian Moran (MBA 1996), Club Co-Vice President for Entrepreneurship, encouraged all HBS graduates to join Alumni Startups. "If you're an entrepreneur," she said, "there is no better place to get exposed to the startup community."

The New Venture Competition was sponsored by Google Cloud, Polsinelli law firm, and HBS Alumni Angels of Greater New York.

HBS Alumni Angels Make a Devil of a Difference

Ask Jason E. Klein (MBA 1986) to name the signature achievement of the HBS Alumni Angels of Greater New York, and he will not cite the $13 million that members have invested across more than ninety early-stage companies.

“Our greatest accomplishment has been our rapid growth to become the largest angel investing group in terms of membership in the Northeast,” said Klein, Chairman of HBSAANY and Co-Vice President, Entrepreneurship. Klein acknowledges that angel investing “can be a pretty profitable enterprise,” but adds that investors also enjoy advising entrepreneurs. “It’s a chance to be intimately engaged with some game-changing startups,” he said.

Angel investors have expertise across twenty sectors and can tap the HBS network for additional insight. A New York HBS Angels’ typical funding round is about $150,000, which can be supplemented by other angel groups and HBS Alumni Angel chapters in other cities.

The Angels welcome Club members as new investors and encourage entrepreneurs (with or without a Harvard connection) to apply for funding and advice.

It is a mark of the success of the program in generating financial support for entrepreneurs that a quarter of the Club members are now angels. Once again, HBS alumni have stepped up to participate in an important endeavor.”

PRO BONO CONSULTING Community Partners Honors Outstanding Nonprofit Leaders

Every year, the Community Partners program enables HBS alumni volunteers to advise nonprofit organizations in many fields. This year, for example, Club members helped Getting Out and Staying Out expand to help more people find jobs after being incarcerated.

Every other year, the Community Partners program, Co-Chaired by Charles Toder (MBA 1962) and Clare Peeters (MBA 2000), also celebrates nonprofit leaders with Leadership Awards. This year, sixty-two organizations applied for the awards. Leo Corbett (MBA 1975) and William J. Meurer (MBA 1990) were Co-Chairs of this awards event.

Gay Men's Health Crisis, Inc. led by Kelsey Louie, won the Gold Award and $25,000. Music & Memory, led by Dan Cohen, won Silver and $10,000. Graham Windham, run by Jess Dannhauser, received Bronze and $5,000.

At the awards event, HBS Professor Herman B. "Dutch" Leonard shared leadership lessons from "Hamilton," the hit musical. "Like Hamilton himself, these nonprofit leaders and alums are so deeply rooted in New York," he said.

Skills Gap Success Attracts Second Big Hospital Partner

The Skills Gap Initiative notched two successes this year as another class of medical billing specialists graduated from LaGuardia Community College, and Mount Sinai asked to join Weill Cornell Medicine as a full partner in the job-training program.

Richard Kane (MBA 1968) and Barry Puritz (MBA 1965) started the program after learning some jobs went unfilled because applicants lacked skills. They joined with LaGuardia on the medical billing program, which is free to qualifying students in partnership with NYC's Small Business Services and the New York Alliance for Careers in Healthcare.

In its last three years, the program trained more than one hundred people; more than eighty percent of its graduates were placed in healthcare jobs. "We've known for some time that the skills gap is a problem," said Kane. "Demonstrating that there is a model to close the skills gap is very uplifting."

With starting salaries of $35,000 to $45,000, the jobs represent a significant step up the socioeconomic ladder for many students. "I have never experienced anything as fulfilling as creating opportunities for people who otherwise struggle," Puritz said.

"Our work with the HBS team has been instrumental in creating pathways to the middle class for our largely low-income students. HBS alums have opened doors to employers helping our students get the training and on-site learning they need to compete in today's economy. LaGuardia's collaboration with the HBS team revolutionized how we now approach our workforce training."

Connect with Alumni, Talk to CEOs, Explore New Fields

Whether you are interested in meeting celebrated CEOs, peeking behind the curtain at Broadway shows, learning about the latest new technology, or running to raise money for good causes, The Club's programming team has events you should know about—more than one hundred every year.

The CEO Series sponsored by Vici Partners lets Club members talk with leaders from Washington to Wall Street. Like most Club events, the CEO Series is off the record, fostering candor and dialog. "It's a great opportunity to interact with other alumni of different backgrounds and meet CEOs in an intimate, informal setting," said Barrie Moskowitz (MBA 1992), Vice President for Programming.

Two popular speakers last year were Ray Dalio, founder of Bridgewater Associates, and Glenn Fogel, CEO of Booking Holdings. Other Club programs include discussions with best-selling authors, presentations by HBS professors, career advice, talks about AI, blockchain, and cryptocurrencies, and social events such as wine tastings.

"The Club lets me stay in touch with the School, my class, and other alumni, all while helping the community," said Club Secretary Chuck Callan (MBA 1982).

Club Fêtes Alumni and Breaks a Record

Harvard Business School Dean Nitin Nohria addressed a sold-out crowd of more than 650 alumni and guests at the Harvard Business School Club of New York's fifty-second Annual Leadership Dinner at the Pierre Hotel on April 30.

The event, chaired by Prakash A. Melwani (MBA 1986) recognized outstanding alumni and raised a record-setting sum to support HBS and HBS Club of New York operations and Mission, including professional development opportunities for alumni and pro bono mentoring and consulting for the Greater New York community.

Prakash introduced the winner of the Business Statesman Award, Barry S. Sternlicht (MBA 1986), Chairman and CEO of Starwood Capital. HBS Senior Associate Dean Das Narayandas introduced David M. Linn (MBA 2000), who won the John C. Whitehead Social Enterprise Award with his late wife Jen Goodman Linn (MBA 1999). Kimberly Weisul, the Editor-at-Large of Inc. magazine, announced the Entrepreneurship Award winner, Sarah Kauss (MBA 2003).

Bruce Marcus (MBA 1980), Lance Stuart (MBA 1978), and Amy Vecchione (MBA 1984) were Co-Chairs of the Dinner Committee.

Club's Sponsorship Program Is Off to a Quick Start

To expand and diversify its sources of revenue, The Club this year initiated a Corporate Sponsorship Program and quickly signed up its first sponsor, Vici Partners, to underwrite The Club's 2019 CEO Series of off-the-record dialogues with prominent thought leaders.

CEO SERIES

SPONSORED BY VICI PARTNERS

"My partners and I believe sponsoring the CEO Series is a good investment," said Lance Stuart (MBA 1978), a partner at the management consulting firm.

Besides wooing sponsors, Ilana Goldman (MBA 2002), The Club's first Vice President for Corporate Sponsorships, has been busy defining the program's mission and establishing a process.

After getting the program off the ground, she said she is eager to focus on signing up new sponsors and providing greater value to members in The Club's centennial year. Alumni suggestions and participation are welcome, she said.

"This is an incredible opportunity for a select group of corporate sponsors to engage with The Club and the wider community," Ilana said.

The CEO Series schedule and registration form are available on The Club website at <https://www.hbscnyc.org/events/?s=CEO+Series>

Answers to The Club's Centennial Quiz

Pencils down! It's time to assess your Club trivia quotient.

1910s Nine gentlemen from New York State enrolled in 1908. Only two were in the first graduating class. One from Brooklyn and one from Oneonta. Graduate school for business education was experimental and many students took a few courses and then went into the workforce.

1920s Wallace Brett Donham was Dean; Albert H. Gordon (MBA 1925), the man who saved Kidder Peabody after the crash, was Club President.

1930s Club President Carl R. Boll (MBA 1922) founded the "Thursday Night Club," where he taught HBS graduates job-search strategies and provided a forum to share information and encourage one another.

1940s Marvin Bower (MBA 1930), who took over the consulting side of James O. McKinsey & Company, a consulting and accounting firm, after the founder's death in 1937 and built it into the McKinsey & Company we know today.

1950s Donald K. David (MBA 1919) won the first Business Statesman Award; he had been Club President in 1928 and HBS Dean from 1942 to 1955. He was Ford Foundation Chairman at the time he received the award.

1960s The speaker was Mary Wells, who had recently launched Wells Rich Greene, and became the first woman to found, own, and run a major ad agency. Club member

1960s Jacques C. Nordeman (MBA 1964) invited her. When Wells' firm went public in 1968, she became the first female CEO of a company on the New York Stock Exchange.

1970s Kenneth A. Powell (MBA 1974) joined The Club Board in 1979. In 1984, he became the first African American elected Club President. He is now President of the HBS African American Alumni Association and Board Member of The Club Board.

1980s Donna R. Ecton (MBA 1971) was elected Club President in 1980. Millington F. McCoy (HRPBA 1963) was elected Chair of the Board in 1984.

1990s They were women—the first women to receive a Club award. Washington Post Publisher Katharine Graham won in 1998 and Marian Wright Edelman of the Children's Defense Fund in 1999. Edelman was also the first person of color to win a Club award.

2000s The Internet, of course. In 2000, The Club hosted "Untethered New York: Strategies for Success in the Mobile Internet World," "Managing and Growing on the Internet," and "Making the Transition to Internet Space."

2010s Alumni Angels came first, in 2011; the Entrepreneurship Award in 2015. Alumni Startups changed their name in 2018, though the group began as Alums in the Alley in 2015.

A Record Dinner and a Second Century

Mark Tatum (MBA 1998) doesn't hesitate when asked for the highlight of his first year as Club Chairman: The record amount—exceeding $2 million—raised at the annual Leadership Dinner at the Pierre Hotel in April, which honored Barry Sternlicht (MBA 1986) of Starwood Capital.

"I am incredibly proud of the work the team did to deliver that," Mark said, calling out Dinner Chairman Prakash Melwani (MBA 1986) and Dinner Co-Chairs Bruce Marcus (MBA 1980), Lance Stuart (MBA 1978), and Amy Vecchione (MBA 1984).

He is equally excited about The Club's landmark anniversary in 2020. "Our centennial is a cause for reflection and celebration," he said, "and for continuing to envision how HBS and HBSers can have a positive effect on the New York community."

Mark encouraged HBS alumni to join The Club and give back to the community by advising entrepreneurs, opening career paths for low-wage workers, consulting with nonprofits, or investing in promising startups. "The impact we have really does make New York better," he said.

Mark also welcomed new board members Chris Marinak (MBA 2008), Jessica Naeve (MBA 2003), Edward Olebe (MBA 1999), and Craig Robinson (MBA 2002).

"We continue to attract incredibly successful, talented, committed board members who want to serve," he said.

Building a Club to Last

When he became President last year, Andrew Cheskis (MBA 1984) had a clear vision of where he wanted to take The Club. He sought to raise its already considerable impact, recruit more alumni into Club leadership positions, and diversify its sources of revenue.

The Club is delivering on those goals, but is not slowing down. "I want to make sure The Club is built to last, and not reliant on a small cadre of people or unable to weather a difficult financial year," he said.

Club finances were bolstered by record revenue from the Leadership Dinner in April, the organization's largest fundraising event. A new campaign to secure corporate sponsors opens another revenue stream and increases The Club's financial flexibility, Andy said.

The Club's professional staff has grown to six, which helps the organization do more for members, such as expanding its selection of lifelong learning and career development programs. It also enables The Club and its more than 400 alumni volunteers to contribute more to the community through programs such as Community Partners, Alumni Startups, and the Skills Gap Initiative.

"The Club uses the business acumen and enthusiasm of its alumni to provide valuable advice and recognition to nonprofits and startups in the New York area," Andy added.

The Mission of the HBS Club of New York is to Make a Difference and to Support Harvard Business School by Engaging Alumni, Impacting Community, Fostering Leadership and Lifelong Learning.
